

ENDING VIOLENCE
AGAINST WOMEN AND GIRLS
STRATEGY
2022- 2025

Wandsworth is committed to developing an ambitious, long-term strategic approach to ending violence against women and girls (VAWG).

Our strategy is based on a preventative model that has, at the heart of it, plans to deliver the cultural and behavioural shift needed to deliver long-term change in men's attitudes to women. Most importantly, this strategy is informed by survivors.

Acknowledgements

Wandsworth would like to thank the survivors and partner agencies, who shared their experiences and expertise to support the development of this strategy.

We recognise that this is a first step to resolving a much bigger problem, but we know we can only achieve that by working better together and listening to the voices and experiences of those affected.

Survivor Foreword

“We are mothers who have experienced domestic abuse and we want things to be different for our children”

We know what it's like not to have a voice, to keep a secret, to live with coercive controlling behaviour. We know what it is like when we say “No” and we are not heard. Some of us have lived with honour-based violence because we are women.

We are frightened that when our home wasn't safe, our children went to look for comfort and support outside the family home. This was not always safe for them.

We would like to see earlier education and prevention for everyone that will promote awareness around healthy relationships and living with true pride not false pride.

We have learned to be the person we want to be. We will work with the council to make a difference so that the cycle of abuse stops. We know that shame dies when stories are shared, and action is taken.

Working together and hearing directly from the services designed to support us has been beneficial. We feel heard and have the space and opportunity to communicate where things need to be improved. Having all partners and agencies working together will have the most impact and is the way forward. To be part of that helps us to feel positive that the right action is being taken.

This strategy is a step forward to making the changes needed to address this important issue that impacts so many in so many different ways.

‘The voices of survivors is central to our strategy’

Understanding Violence against Women and Girls

Violence against Women and Girls (VAWG) is both a form of discrimination and a violation of human rights. To understand the changes needed we must first have a collective understanding of what VAWG is...

In Wandsworth we have adopted the United Nations declaration on elimination of violence against women, to support our understanding of VAWG. The United Nations defines violence against women as:

“any act of gender-based violence that results or is likely to result in, physical, sexual, or psychological harm or suffering to women, including threats of such acts, coercion or arbitrary deprivation of liberty, that is directed at a woman because she is a woman or acts of violence which are suffered disproportionately by women.”

The definition incorporates a wide range of abusive behaviours including physical, sexual, financial, emotional, and psychological abuse, and describes violent and oppressive patterns of behaviour and practices to achieve power and control over women and girls. When considering VAWG we must also examine the impacts on the physical safety, health and emotional wellbeing of individuals and impacts on families, carers, children and the community as a whole.

VAWG can be categorised under the following 10 strands:

Why we need to address this...

Violence against women and girls has increased.

Women and girls should not have to tolerate acts of abuse or violence. They should be empowered to live their lives without fear of sexual objectification, harassment, or physical and mental abuse.

The tragic and fatal events of Sarah Everard, Sabina Nessa, Biba Henry and Nicole Smallman have resonated across the country and highlighted and reignited the urgency to revisit and review the approach to addressing VAWG. Raising awareness, educating others and creating places where women and girls feel safe and are able to go about their lives confidently, without fear of being assaulted or harassed is paramount.

We know that the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic exacerbated incidents of violence against women and girls. The Office for National Statistics (ONS) report identified that in mid-May 2020, there was a 12% increase in the number of acts of violence and domestic abuse cases referred to victim support. Between April and June 2020, there was a 65% increase in calls to the national domestic abuse helpline, when compared to the first three months of that year, and between March 2019 and March 2020, a 7% growth in police recorded domestic abuse crimes.

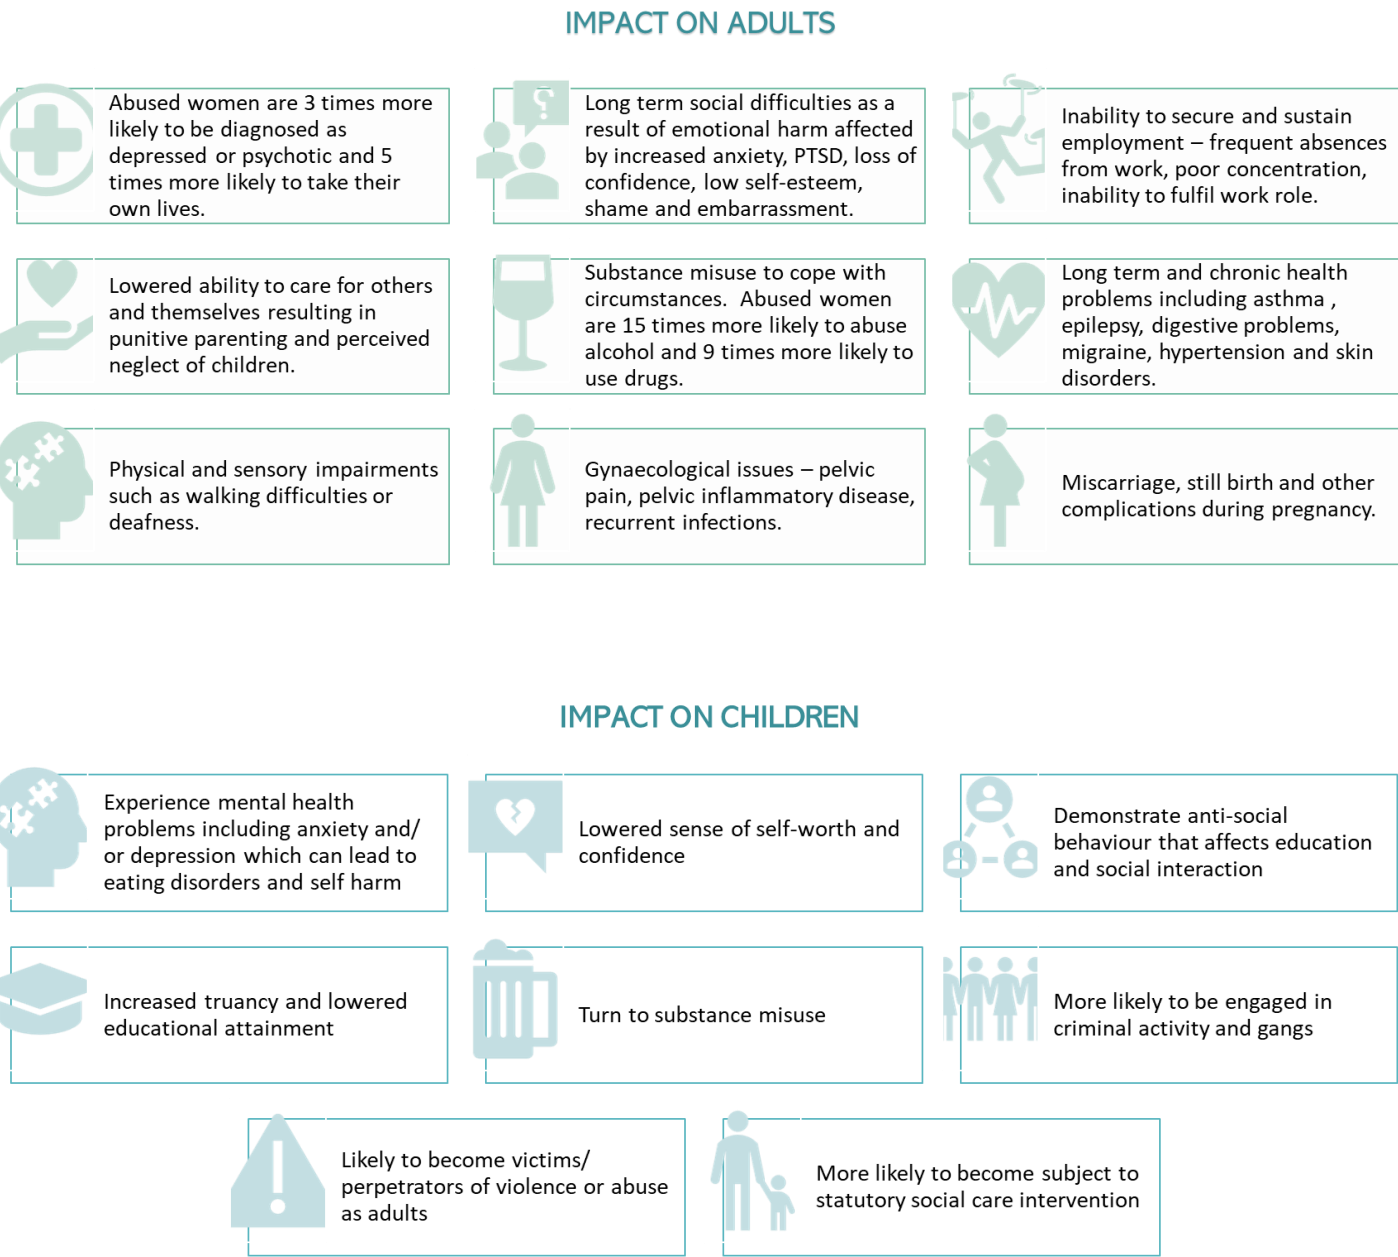

The hidden nature of abuse and the reluctance and limitations of victims to seek support or medical attention during the pandemic makes it difficult to fully understand the widespread impact and changing nature of domestic abuse. However, in April 2020, the Home Affairs Committee said there was “evidence that cases are escalating more quickly to become complex and serious, with higher levels of physical violence and coercive control.” We need to act to address this.

While this strategy focuses on women and girls, we acknowledge that men and boys can also be victims of violence and domestic abuse. Women are certainly more disproportionately affected but there is much more we can do to support men and boys across a number areas, including their safety. Further work around this is being developed. Irrespective of gender, all victims of domestic abuse can and should expect a compassionate and responsive service.

Violence against women and girls can have lasting impacts.

Research into the longer-term impact of domestic abuse/ VAWG on children and adults demonstrates that this can have negative effects on health and wellbeing. The longer domestic abuse is experienced or witnessed the more severe the effects can be, which prevents children and adults from achieving their full potential

‘The new Domestic Abuse Act places new duties on local authorities’

Emerging Legislation- Domestic Abuse Act 2021

The government committed to transforming the response to domestic abuse, through the introduction of a Domestic Abuse Bill. The Bill received Royal Assent and is now law.

The new Domestic Abuse Act provides a statutory definition for Domestic Abuse, along with a number of legislative changes. There are four key aims to the Act: 1) Protect and Support Victims; 2) Transform the Justice System; 3) Improve Performance and 4) Promote Awareness.

The new Act, places requirements upon local areas to ensure there is a robust and coordinated approach to domestic abuse under the new bill. In London, this is a role carried out by the Greater London Authority (GLA) who will discharge duties for Wandsworth and other London Boroughs.

Under the new Domestic Abuse Act the GLA will:

- (a) Assess the need for support and prepare strategies to provide support for victims who need to reside in relevant accommodation
- (b) Appoint a multi-agency board
- (c) Assess the need for support in their area (London)
- (d) Publish a strategy
- (e) Monitor and Evaluate the effectiveness of the strategy
- (f) Report back annually

What this means for the local area:

Wandsworth has a duty to co-operate with the GLA to enable them to fulfil the duties of the new Act. This may require allocating staff and resources to providing the necessary information, including data to support a London wide needs assessment.

Whilst there is no requirement for a local Partnership Board, it is prudent that the VAWG Strategic Board evolves to perform a function to provide local governance in respect of our GLA obligations in response to the new Domestic Abuse Act.

What we know about violence against women and girls...

Understanding some of the factors that make domestic abuse and violence against women and girls more prevalent is crucial to our work to eradicate it. National data and information provide a useful basis to enable us to deepen and widen our contextual understanding of VAWG.

Diagram 1: those more likely to experience domestic abuse

Data published by the Office for National Statistics in November 2020 indicated that in the last year those more likely to experience domestic abuse were likely to have one or more of the characteristics described in diagram 1:

In the year ending March 2020, 92% of defendants in domestic abuse-related prosecutions were male, according to the ONS. 77% of the victims were female

Intimate partner violence is by far the most prevalent form of violence against women - 1 in 3 women, are subjected to physical or sexual violence by an intimate partner or sexual violence from a non-partner

Younger women are at highest risk, the highest rates (16%) of intimate partner violence in the past 12 months occurred among young women

Violence disproportionately affects women living in deprivation

Victims of abuse have a higher rate of drug and/or alcohol misuse (whether it starts before or after the abuse): at least 20% of high-risk victims of abuse report using drugs and/or alcohol and an analysis of domestic homicide reviews found that in more than 50%, substance use was mentioned

Only around 15% of those who experience sexual violence report it to the police. 5.7% of reported cases lead to convictions

The number of people prosecuted and convicted for rape fell to the lowest level since records began. Police recorded 55,130 cases of rape, but there were only 2,102 prosecutions and 1,439 convictions in England and Wales between 2019 and 2020

5,000 women are raped and over 400,000 women are sexually assaulted in England and Wales every year

97% of women aged 18-24 have been sexually harassed, while 80% of women of all ages said they had experienced sexual harassment in public spaces

Understanding the prevalence of 'honour'-based abuse, including female genital mutilation (FGM) and forced marriage, is challenging – information is limited. Experimental statistics from the Home Office show 2,024 'honour'-based abuse offences were recorded by the police in 2019/20

4% of adults aged 16-59 experienced stalking in the last year – this equates to 1.3 million victims. Of these 892,000 are women, 50% more than the number of men

A woman dies at the hands of a man every three days

Mental health issues: 40% of high-risk victims of abuse report mental health difficulties

The total number of women killed at the end of March 2019 increased by 10% from 220 to 241, the second consecutive annual increase and the highest number since 2006 – the majority (50%) were killed by intimate partners or family members

Nearly 2 in 3 children (62%) exposed to domestic violence were also directly harmed

What we know about violence against women and girls in Wandsworth

In 2019, Wandsworth commissioned a needs assessment to understand and inform the development and approach to addressing domestic abuse /VAWG and the services that are required. From this we know that:

Domestic abuse is generally under-reported: crime survey data continues to show domestic abuse is not reported when offences first occur.

The demand for domestic abuse services will increase considering the local projected population growth of 7.3% by 2030 and British Crime Survey results that show significant under-reporting.

There is an under-representation of older people aged over 65 who report abuse, accounting for 5% of victims.

Approximately 11% of Wandsworth’s population report a long-term health problem or disability and we know that disabled people are twice as likely to be a victim of domestic abuse and a significant proportion of high-risk domestic abuse cases have specialist needs regarding mental health and substance misuse.

We have a gap in knowledge around the experiences of the LGBTQ+ community: From the data contained within the ONS data sets regarding sexuality, it is estimated that at least 2.2% of the population are LGBTQ+.

More of our services need to be targeted to reach black and ethnic minority communities.

Young women and girls are over-represented as victims of sexual offences compared to the local population levels.

The wards where VAWG is most prevalent (or reported) in Wandsworth are Roehampton and Putney Heath, Latchmere and Queenstown. These wards combined account for 27.5% of incidents across the borough.

The voice of survivors – children and adults

Ensuring the voices and lived experiences of survivors are heard and responded to in our strategy is vital. To support this a number of workshops have been held to gather the views of professionals, communities and survivors. This has supported the development of our priorities and strategic aims.

The workshops provide a powerful platform for us to really understand what needs to change. The views of children and survivors about how they feel and the changes they would like to see are outlined here:

Our approach and commitment to addressing acts of violence against women and girls and in Wandsworth

1. Survivor Voice

We will ensure that the voices of survivors, communities and professionals are listened to. We will hold regular consultations and workshops to obtain a unique insight into community perspectives and survivor experiences, identifying areas to focus and improve upon. This includes early education through to support from specialist organisations and training for our professionals.

2. Coordinated Community Response

No single agency can be responsible for our vision of ending violence against women and girls. Working in partnership across all agencies and the community will ensure that we can achieve the best possible outcomes for victims/survivors in Wandsworth.

The response to the pandemic in Wandsworth has demonstrated the power of communities, capable of springing rapidly into action. The crisis showed that great things can be achieved when everyone in the community works together.

3. Intersectionality

Ensuring that we understand the interconnected nature of social categorisation, ensuring service delivery reflects service demand and seeks to address the gaps that exist in services to support those with protected characteristics and those disproportionately affected.

We commit to actively seeking to support the duties instilled by the Equalities Act 2010, having due regard for the need to eliminate unlawful discrimination, advance the equality of opportunity and foster good relationships between people from different groups. This includes population groups with protected characteristics of, Age, Disability, Gender reassignment, Marriage and civil partnership, Pregnancy and maternity, Race, Religion or belief, Sex, Sexual orientation.

4. Continuous learning and development

Tackling Domestic Abuse and Violence Against Women and Girls is a complex subject, where our understanding continues to evolve.

We will deliver practice and process that reflects and embraces emerging intelligence and research, that continually evolves and is based upon reflection and learning, including Domestic Homicide Reviews, Serious Case Reviews and Adult Reviews.

Our priorities

01

Changing attitudes and behaviours

To support a better understanding of VAWG, the impact it has and what healthy relationships look and feel like.

- Effecting a culture change to recognise and respond to Domestic Abuse and acts of Violence Against Women and Girls.
- Empowering practice across organisations through strategic leadership, operational management and supervision.
- Increasing public awareness so that those experiencing abuse will be better able to understand what they are experiencing and know that help is available.
- Encouraging public bodies and employers to adopt a common approach to supporting employees who experience abuse, ensuring policies are in place, staff and managers are trained and creating the confidence for employees to disclose abuse.

Safety and support

Ensuring women and girls are safe in public spaces and that those who experience abuse and/or violence (and their children) are safe and protected from harm and have access to the right support at the right time.

- Provision of high-risk intervention support, followed up with more emotional and practical support that may include counselling, peer and group work.
- Ensuring the first response of agencies is professional and compassionate,
- Partners work together, providing safety and support in a holistic manner, taking account of individual and family circumstances.
- Women and girls are safe in public spaces and within the overall nighttime economy.
- Support and protection are provided whilst action is taken against abusers.

04

Holding perpetrators to account

Perpetrators of abuse recognise they are responsible for their behaviour and subsequently reduce the levels of violence/abuse they perpetrate.

- Ensuring a focus on prevention and early intervention by developing a range of universal perpetrator educational programmes that encourage healthy relationships.
- Ensuring that perpetrators are able to recognise their own behaviours as unhealthy and abusive, and signpost them to appropriate help and support.
- Supporting perpetrators to understand the consequences of their behaviour and putting in place measures to change perpetrator behaviours.
- Putting responsibility on perpetrators rather than on victims/survivors who often have to change the way they live, move and leave their supportive social networks behind.
- Decreasing risks to victims and wider family members through appropriate use of criminal justice processes.

02

Early identification and help

Enabling and supporting agencies to identify the early signs of violence and abuse, to provide opportunities for women and girls to disclose and receive the right help early on.

- Ensuring there is a strong, effective and co-ordinated response across the system that supports women and girls at risk of abuse and violence.
- Our services are confident in identifying the signs of abuse. They are trained and enabled to engage, to risk assess and signpost and support effectively in a way that delivers lasting changes in the lives of those impacted by acts of abuse and violence.
- Providing appropriate training to support awareness.
- Improving information sharing to prevent issues escalating.

Delivery

We are committed to achieving our goals to eliminate violence against women and girls. We have been ambitious, but we will be resilient in our approach to achieving them. Violence Against Women and Girls impacts all our lives and it will take collective responsibility to address it.

This strategy will be delivered by listening to the needs and experiences of our communities. We know that our communities are rich with assets that can provide solutions to address many of these needs. We want women and girls to feel safe and supported by their community and know where to access support. We can only achieve this by really listening to and understanding the needs of our communities.

The strategy will be delivered by a wide range of partners, our councillors, council officers, our residents, experts by experience, practitioners, stakeholders, and our communities. Community meetings and websites allow residents and community groups to work with organisations that provide local services, like the police and the council. The aim is to build community resilience, improve community safety, and reduce violence.

Practitioners' Forum

Practitioners working or volunteering in VAWG services will have unique insight into needs and solutions and as such will have a route in to influencing and informing our work via the VAWG Forum.

Survivor Forum

Whilst survivors will be involved with the wider community approach, we understand that they may also need a safe space to share their experiences. VAWG crosses public and private spaces and impacts people in different ways; those with lived experience, both adults and children and young people, may need a separate space that is survivor-led, inclusive, confidential, and appropriately supported. A small panel of survivors will lead and manage these forums and engage directly with the wider structure on their behalf.

Strategic priorities

Each priority in this strategy will be overseen by a Strategy Priority Workstream – each workstream will represent the relevant expertise in our borough, collectively identify what action is needed and own the delivery of those actions. The operational action plans they create will set out how we will deliver on our commitments to meet our goals; these will be shared and publicly available. We will ensure there is officer resource available to support these groups.

VAWG strategic partnership board

The Strategy Priority Workstreams will report regularly to a Strategic Partnership Board to ensure there is singular and central oversight of the workstreams and provides the link to the Community Safety Partnership and GLA.
