Crunch time for airport debate

A final recommendation by Sir Howard Davies' airports Commission to the Government on whether to expand Heathrow or Gatwick is imminent.

Council leader Ravi Govindia explains more:

"It is a great shame this commission was allowed to bring Heathrow expansion back onto the national agenda and I know how deeply upsetting a prospect this is for our residents. Working closely with local people the council has exposed serious flaws in Sir Howard's work which severely underplay the true cost of this project.

"We have also actively supported expansion at Gatwick which would disrupt far fewer people and would bring great benefits to this borough's economy and transport network.

"We hope the commission's final recommendation will favour Gatwick, but if Heathrow is put forward we will ensure ministers understand the severe consequences that come with expanding this airport."

Party in the park

Battersea Park's historic and picturesque bandstand features prominently in the British film industry's hit movie A Royal Night Out.

The film, starring Emily Watson and Rupert Everett, tells the story of VE Day 1945 through the eyes of two young princesses – Margaret and the future Queen Elizabeth. The two teenage princesses leave Buckingham Palace to join the millions of Londoners who took to the streets that night to celebrate. One of its most memorable scenes was shot on location in Battersea Park.

Film and TV work is earns the town hall around £250,000 a year in additional income with film makers paying to use council-owned land and property to shoot their footage. The cash is ploughed back into frontline services.

Other productions shot in the borough include 24, New Tricks, the Honourable Woman, Esio Trot, the feature film Jack Ryan, The Woman in Gold, starring Dame Helen Mirren, Code of a Killer, Fast Girls, Little Crackers, Silent Witness, Above Suspicion, Episodes, Not Going Out and Get Santa, featuring Jim Broadbent.

GARDEN FRIENDS

Age UK Wandsworth's Garden Friends service matches older people who are unable to maintain their gardens with a volunteer who lives locally who can give a few hours a month to provide some basic gardening support as well as visiting regularly to develop a friendship and provide companionship. Garden owners only pay for the garden work which is £15 an hour or £30 for two hours.

Garden owners who use the service and become members will also be able to access additional garden related benefits, activities and events to extend social networks.

If you are interested in finding out more or would like to become a volunteer on the service please contact Sue Sweeney, Garden Friends Coordinator on 020 8877 8946 (Tues-Thurs) or email sue.sweeney@ageukwandsworth.org.uk election results

All three members of parliament representing the people of Wandsworth held on to their seats in May's General Election.

Jane Ellison, Justine Greening and Sadiq Khan remain the borough's MPs, retaining their seats in Battersea, Putney and Tooting respectively.

A council by-election was also held in Earlsfield ward, after one of the three Earlsfield seats was left vacant following the death of Cllr Adrian Knowles. The seat was won by Angela Graham for the Conservatives.

Work starts on Ram Quarter

The foundation stone has been laid at the Ram Quarter in Wandsworth town centre.

The scheme by developers Greenland will mean 661 new homes plus shops, cafes, bars and restaurants. Many of the site's historic buildings will be restored and refurbished and a micro-brewery and a brewing museum will also be part of the completed scheme. See page 24 for details on current brewing at the site.

The development will generate around 500 new permanent jobs and will mean the River Wandle will be opened up and a new riverside walk created. Phase one is due for completion in early 2017.

The scheme could form part of a remodelled Wandsworth town centre, with proposals to remove the one-way system and open it up to pedestrians, buses and bikes. See article on page 9.

Self Help Wandsworth is a new programme of support for self help groups in the borough. The programme is being delivered by Lifetimes, the Council of Voluntary Service in Wandsworth.

What is a self help group?

Self help groups are support groups that offer and provide mutual support or mutual aid. People often gain huge benefits from talking to others who have a shared experience, whether it be a diagnosis of a long term condition or having faced a similar life experience such as loss, recovery or survival.

Self help groups may be run in a variety of ways such as:

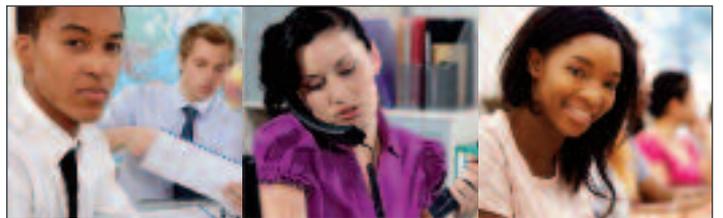

- Peer led self help groups with face to face meetings
- Professionally supported self help groups
- Organisationally hosted self help groups
- Social network and online self help groups

What support and services will the Self Help Wandsworth Programme offer?

- 1:1 Tailored meetings to offer support, advice and guidance
- Training workshops for new and existing groups
- Themed meetings and Discussion evenings
- Development and promotional events
- Networking Opportunities

New rules to protect town centres

Planning guidance to protect community pubs from redevelopment, restrict the number of new fast food takeaways near schools and control the spread of betting shops has been approved following consultation.

The guidance – known as the ‘Supplementary Planning Document’ - builds on policies in Wandsworth’s Local Plan and aims to keep town centres at the heart of their local communities.

A limit has been put on the number of fast food takeaways which can open within 400 metres of local schools and colleges, and new rules mean shops cannot be turned into betting shops or payday loan shops without planning permission.

This month councillors will discuss putting ‘Article 4 Directions’ on a list of pubs of historic, architectural or community value so owners would need to apply for permission before knocking them down or changing them into shops or homes. In addition the new guidance also gives the council stronger grounds on which to refuse planning applications to redevelop or change the use local pubs.

Get Active Festival

The sixth annual Get Active Wandsworth Festival will be held in King George’s Park on Saturday July 18.

The day will be packed with fun free activities for all ages and abilities to enjoy, including bouncy castles, street dance, circus skills and face painting for children, plus yoga, tai chi, NHS healthchecks and climbing.

To find out more, see the ad on page 9, visit www.wandsworth.gov.uk/active or www.facebook.com/activewandsworth, or follow @activewands, hashtag #GAWF2015.

Creative writing

A new creative writing group has been set up for people over 50s and housebound. Groups will be run over the phone and by post. Find out more at (020) 7223 6369.

Remembering heroes

Relatives of former pupils of the old Wandsworth School who were killed in the Great War and World War II are invited to a memorial service.

On July 8 a service will be held to remember the 149 former pupils of the old school who lost their lives. The names of the fallen can be seen at www.old-wandsworthians-trust.com. If you know any of these men and would like to go to the service, email Les Herbert at Leswands@gmail.com, or write to him at OWMF Service, PO Box 9059, Lyme Regis, DT6 9EG.

WAND card scheme

Wandsworth businesses keen to help families with disabled children are urged to join the council’s WAND Card scheme.

Wandsworth has 800 youngsters on its Disabled Children’s Register who are currently WAND card holders, meaning they have complex special needs or disabilities. The card can be used to get extra support from participating business, such as fast tracking through tills, helping with shopping, offering concessions or opening at special times. For more information about joining the ‘WAND friendly’ scheme contact Lucia Daniels or Eleanor Thain on FIS@wandsworth.gov.uk or call (020) 8871 7899.

Nicola dons mayoral robes

The new Wandsworth mayor is Cllr Nicola Nardelli - the first mayor of Italian descent in Wandsworth's history.

She was elected to the council in 2005 and has represented Queenstown Ward in north Battersea throughout her town hall career. She has served on the housing committee and the former environment, leisure and community safety committee.

The new mayor, pictured with her consort, son Daniel, has pledged to raise money for Wandsworth-based dyslexia charities and for RAPt (the Rehabilitation for Addicted Prisoners Trust) which works to help Wandsworth Prison inmates overcome drug and alcohol dependence.

Among her duties as Wandsworth's First Citizen will be spearheading three competitions aimed at inspiring local young people - young chef of the year, young designer of the year and young grower of the year.

The deputy mayor is Cllr Leslie McDonnell who represents East Putney.

One-way update

The results of a consultation show widespread support of outline proposals for a radical overhaul of the Wandsworth one way system.

Under the proposals traffic would be re-routed away from Wandsworth High Street onto Armoury Way, which would become two-way. The aim is to end the dominance of cars and lorries in the town centre, leaving it free for buses, bicycles and pedestrians.

Removing through traffic from the gyratory has been a long term strategic aim of the council, although the works can only be approved and carried out by TfL. Two thirds of those who took part in the recent consultation felt the plans would improve how they use the town centre.

Further public consultation will be carried out later this year into the detailed plans and if these are approved construction could begin in 2017. For details and pictures, visit www.tfl.gov.uk/wandsworth-town-centre.

Get set for Formula E

Local people are to be offered free tickets to London's inaugural Formula E race weekend later this month.

Two thousand complementary tickets are being offered to residents who live near the park, including those from the Doddington, Ethelburga and Latchmere housing estates, and also to pupils who attend schools in the area, members of local amenity groups and some Battersea-based charities.

London's two races will be held on the weekend of June 27 and 28 and mark the climax of the current Formula E championship season, which has seen the drivers compete in Berlin, Beijing, Buenos Aires, Moscow, Miami and Monaco.

The racing cars use cutting edge electric motors that produce virtually no noise and no harmful emissions. A full speed test drive using a fully-fledged Formula E race car took place in the park at 5am one morning last August and went completely unnoticed – including by those living just yards away.

Staging the London races in Battersea Park means that over the next five years an estimated £1m will be available to fund improvements to the park and pay its ongoing maintenance costs. In addition the race organisers have funded the resurfacing of the previously uneven and rutted Rosary car park and repaired other carriageway defects.

Councillors only gave the event the green light after hearing that the Heritage Lottery Fund (HLF) had agreed that the park was a suitable venue because its important historical features would not be damaged or compromised. Approval from the HLF was a key consideration because it paid for an extensive range of improvements to Battersea Park between 1998 and 2003. Councillors have also decided that a section of the park must be kept open for non-ticket holders – so that local people who have no interest in the races but want to visit the park that weekend can still do so.

Work starts on Battersea tube station

Transport for London has now started work on a new Northern Line Tube station at the Battersea Power Station site in Nine Elms.

Another station is being built just off Wandsworth Road, close to the borough border in Lambeth. A new tunnel will link the two new stations and connect with the existing underground line at Kennington. Trains are expected to start running in 2019, cutting times from Battersea to the West End to just 15 minutes.

The cost of the Tube extension is being met by a tax on development sites in Nine Elms and through the extra business rates revenue the area's growing economy will generate. Spoil from the tunnelling work will be taken away by barge to reduce impacts on the local road network.

Royal visit for Battersea

The Queen has visited Battersea Dogs' and Cats' Home to open new state-of-the-art kennels.

The Queen, who has been a Patron of Battersea since 1956, and The Duke of Edinburgh were given a tour of the new kennels. The new £4.8m facilities replace old Victorian kennels and will provide a warm and safe environment for the most vulnerable lost, abandoned and unwanted dogs. Each kennel has built-in speakers to play calming music and an external run area, and adjoining paddocks have paddling pools, climbing mounds, play equipment, and plants to awaken and interest dogs' senses.

The pictures show Her Majesty meeting a resident corgi, and greeting local dignitaries including Wandsworth Council leader Ravi Govindia.

Ernest Bevin boys visit number 10

Students from Ernest Bevin College have visited Downing Street, the Houses of Parliament and Clarence House as part of the Naz Legacy Foundation's Diversity Programme which encourages young people from minority backgrounds to visit cultural institutions.

The Foundation was set up in memory of Naz Bokhari, former Principal of Ernest Bevin College and the first Muslim head of a secondary school in the UK.

Speaker John Bercow welcomed the group to Speaker's House in Westminster said: "The Naz Legacy Foundation's Diversity Programme is playing a vital role in educating students about the importance of our democracy and the need for everyone to exercise their right to vote."

Get your dog chipped

Did you know that from next April it will be compulsory for all dogs in the UK to be microchipped?

The council has had a compulsory microchipping scheme for tenants and leaseholders on its estates since 2009, and around 5,000 people have already registered their dog.

Wandsworth offers free microchipping for tenants and leaseholders. You can make an appointment and this will usually be done at your home. People are urged to get their pet chipped as soon as possible to avoid the last minute rush before the new national laws come in.

If you are not a tenant or leaseholder, you can still get your dog chipped by the council team, but there will be a charge. Alternatively, find other local providers on the Kennel Club website at www.thekennelclub.org.uk.

Get your health road tested any where, any time, any place

Wandsworth public health has teamed up with the Men's Health Forum to help give the borough's men free, confidential online health advice.

Wandsworth men who have a nagging worry about their health but are too busy, don't think it's important, or who are reluctant to go to the doctor can now get a free, confidential online Man MOT. The Man MOT is designed by and for men. You can use it at anytime from a PC, tablet or smart phone. You can text chat directly to an NHS GP about any health problem at all twice a week or email any time.

The service is totally anonymous – while the MOT GP might ask your age or for other information to help them to help you better, you don't have to give your name and nothing you say will be shared with anyone – not even your own GP. Nobody will know you've used Man MOT unless you tell them.

All GPs are NHS-trained and fully qualified. The project is funded by the council's public health department.

Our GPs and experts can discuss options with you and direct you to health services if necessary.

You can print out your chat or email it to yourself - again confidentially. This is really useful because you can show it to your own GP if you want to follow up what the Man MOT GP has advised you.

To chat go to www.wandsworthman.net

This year the council's public health team is working to get the borough's men healthier. As well as Man MOT it will be running community events and outreach programmes in the places men go, like barbers and leisure centres. Keep an eye out on www.wandsworthman.net, or follow @wandbc on twitter for updates.

What men say about Man MOT

"Great help and support! Great advice given and made me feel a lot better, before I had even been to the doctors about my problem!"

"Very helpful, as it is difficult to go to the GP about personal issues in person."

"Thank you for your reassurance. I've never used this service before but I found it invaluable. I was comforted and had all my questions answered. Absolutely brilliant."

35-year-old Moses was diagnosed last year with cancer. He is currently in the second phase of treatment.

“At first I thought I had a chest infection, which I ignored for the best part of a year. “When I started to cough up blood and lose weight I put it down to stress. It got to the point that I stopped noticing the cough. I finally booked an appointment with my GP who arranged for X-rays. By the time my cancer had been confirmed it had spread. I started treatment immediately.

“My advice would be to listen to your body. The Man MOT is a great way to get some advice and take the first steps in getting any help you may need.”

DON'T LET YOUR ALARM COST YOU MONEY

Did you know that the council has the power to disconnect residential and commercial alarms that are causing a nuisance?

Often this means the noise and environmental enforcement team will need to get a warrant from a magistrate and then hire a locksmith in order to force entry. These costs are recovered from the property owner. The team also has the power to tow away a vehicle if its alarm is causing a nuisance, and again the owner will have to pay.

Here are three simple steps you can take to avoid an unexpected bill.

- Give neighbours your contact details – they will be the first to hear your alarm and the most affected by it. If they can contact you direct it prevents the need for intervention.
- Register your alarm and contact details with the noise and environmental enforcement team – Every attempt to contact an owner is made before a disconnection is considered.
- Have a separate key-holder – leave a spare key with someone who can be contactable in an emergency and attend your property if you are unable to.

For more advice about alarms or to register your details, or for any other queries about noise nuisance, contact the Noise and Environmental Enforcement Team, Environmental Services, on 020 8871 7869 during office hours, or email noiseandenvironmental@wandsworth.gov.uk.

Fostering Fortnight June 1-14

Keep an eye out for the fostering team at Southside Shopping Centre

Pearl Howard has looked after 44 children over her many years as a foster carer – not including her own five - and says that despite the constant challenges she faces, she wants to provide a stable home to as many children as she can.

"I applied after I saw an advertisement in a newspaper. I asked my husband and kids what they thought, and they said if I felt I could cope, they were happy to go ahead. I come from Jamaica and when I was growing up there were always kids around at home. Neighbours' children and kids from the village would come in and be fed, so it feels normal to me to share what we have with other children.

"Sometimes I look after children in an emergency and it will just be for a few weeks, but I would say the majority of them are with me for years. Some have been with me from the age of 10 to 18. By that time they feel like they are mine.

"One of the most challenging was a Chinese girl who came to me not able to speak a word of English. Now she's studying accountancy at university. I'm extremely proud of her and she still has a key to my home. Many of the children I've looked after still pop in and see me.

"Some of them can be very difficult because they all come with baggage. But I know that the more challenging they are, the more they need a bit of stability in their lives. I don't want them to have to move from one place to the next.

"When I achieve what I set out to achieve I feel very satisfied. If anyone is thinking about fostering I would say 'go for it'. It's not easy to look after someone else's child but there's support out there to help you."

Help available to smokers and vapers during Ramadan

People looking to quit smoking or vaping during the holy month of Ramadan are urged to get help to quit for good.

Ramadan this year is from June 18 to July 17. During this time, practicing Muslims observe a period of fasting during daylight hours. This fast extends to all addictions including vaping, smoking and using other tobacco products such as shisha and smokeless tobacco.

Houda Al Sharifi, Wandsworth council's director of public health, said, "For a regular smoker, going 15 hours without a cigarette is an achievement in itself. However, I would encourage anyone observing Ramadan to take that extra step and experience the full range of health and financial benefits of quitting smoking altogether."

The Wandsworth Stop Smoking Service can offer free help and advice on giving up smoking, vaping or using shisha during Ramadan and beyond. You can also get free support from your local pharmacy and from your GP.

Mahnoor is Wandsworth's top young person

A schoolgirl who has been a driving force in local girls' football has won this year's Wandsworth Young Person of the Year Award.

Mahnoor Rauf established a girls' football project at the TRC Youth Club in Wandsworth. She researched and presented a bid for funding to the Youth Opportunity Fund to cover the cost of equipment and running expenses and went on to captain the TRC Football Club Under 16 Girls.

Mahnoor has helped other young people, some with disabilities and learning difficulties, to complete their Level 1 Junior Sports Leaders' courses. She has also assisted coaches with their Football Association Level 2 coaching course and organised a Level 1 coaching course for 24 young women.

The Outstanding Achievement Award winner was Reiss Ormonde-Cunningham, who is a regional and county swimming champion and a winner at the London Schools Swimming Championship.

The Overcoming Adversity Award winner was Callum Myles who overcame difficult circumstances to twice win the London Amateur Boxing Association championships.

Rotary Award for Contribution to the Community was won by Sophia Dinnall. Sophia is a young carer who still makes time to be fully involved at her school, raise money for charity, develop her talents as an artist and achieve highly academically.

The Wandsworth Community Safety Award went to Bailey Black. Bailey is an inspirational young leader and a role model for younger cadets in the Armed Cadets Force.

Group Award for Voluntary Work was won by Paddock School Metropolitan class. The class work in the school café where they prepare and cook soup and make sandwiches for sale.

The event is organised by the Young Person of the Year Trustees in conjunction with Wandsworth Council's Youth Service and is funded by the Rotary Club, the Keen Group and the Wandsworth Community Safety Trust.

Sharing lives

Michael has a mild learning disability and autism and was finding life a struggle.

But now the 19-year-old has seen his life transformed after taking part in the ground breaking Shared Lives scheme.

Shared Lives gives people with learning disabilities or mental health support needs a real home from home. Carers open up their homes and hearts so that people can have a genuine experience of becoming an integral part of the family, share in the daily activities, relationships and family celebrations and become a member of the local community.

Michael has shared his experience with Trevor, a Certitude Shared Lives carer. They have developed a close relationship and enjoy spending time together on shared interests including football, the cinema, and going to the gym.

Trevor has become an incredibly positive influence upon Michael's life, helping him to find employment and training opportunities, socialise, manage his budgets and just give him someone to talk to. Now Michael is becoming increasingly independent and in January moved into a supported living flat.

"I'm happy to be moving to the next level in my life in getting my own flat. I'm also pleased that I still see Trevor during the week." said Michael.

Shared Lives is run by Balham-based charity Certitude. To find out more, speak to your social worker or visit www.certitude.org.uk.

Thrive garden opens up

Thrive Battersea is taking part in the annual London Open Garden Squares weekend on June 13 and 14.

Go along to the main centre on East Carriage Drive in Battersea Park between 10am and 4pm. Visitors can buy plants and take a tour of the Old English Garden and Herb Garden. Tea and cakes will be served.

Thrive uses gardening to help people with disabilities or ill health, or who are isolated, disadvantaged or vulnerable. Find out more at www.thrive.org.uk.

Appeal for new centre

Fundraising continues in an appeal by the Wandsworth Sensory Support Service for money to open a family centre. The centre will be the first of its kind in the UK and will help families who have a child who is deaf and/or visually impaired, possibly with other complex disabilities, isolation, family breakdown and exhaustion.

The appeal hopes to raise the final £450,000 of the £1.2m needed this summer. Find out more at www.wandsworthsensorysupportservice.org.uk.

Watch the Wandle

The Living Wandle team is looking for schools, youth groups, community organisations and individuals to take a more active role in looking after the river. This might be planting, recording wildlife sightings or cultural activities.

Email livingwandle@wandsworth.gov.uk, call 07500 073049 or find out more at www.wandlevalleypark.co.uk/projects/living-wandle.

John with his cobbled-together brewing equipment

WANDSWORTH'S HIDDEN TREASURES

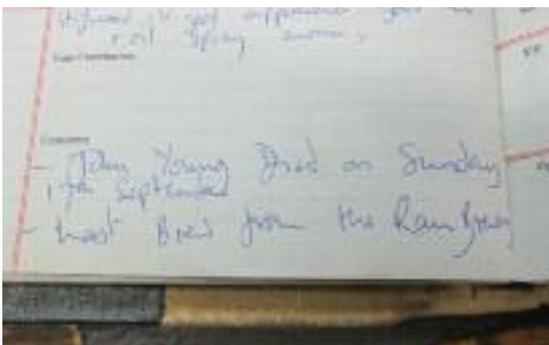

When the Ram Brewery closed in 2006, it seemed Wandsworth's long history as a beer-brewing town could be over.

But brewhouse manager John Hatch was determined to keep the tradition alive. The Ram Brewery's history stretched back to the mid 16th century and John decided to run a tiny microbrewery there so that the site could still boast continuous brewing and retain its title of Britain's oldest brewery site.

This copper was created out of an old tea urn.

The last entry in the old book in which brewing details were recorded records the death of John Young.

New owners of the site, Minerva, and then subsequent owners Greenland, agreed that John could brew two firkins (140 pints) a week and found him space on the site. He cobbled together equipment from bits and pieces left lying around and paid for the malt and hops himself.

He can't sell the beer he produces because he has no licence, but has an 'honesty box' in the tiny bar created in the old tack room so that invited guests could contribute. He'll also brew bespoke beers for private parties, which has given him the chance to experiment with different styles.

While it awaited planning permission the site was also rented out as a film and TV location, and John would brew bespoke beers for the production

This tiny bar was created out of the old Tack Room where the horses' tack was kept.

The Tack Room still bears the signs of previous occupants crews. Actor Phillip Glenister was particularly fond of '80s Ale' made for the Ashes to Ashes crew.

Greenland says it is committed to preserving the site's brewing heritage and a microbrewery will open on the site when phase one of the new Ram Quarter housing and shopping development is completed in 2017.

- You can sample John's ale on National Beer Day on June 15 and regular comedy nights are held at the brewery. To find out more email john.hatch@rambrewery.co.uk

Comment on air quality

The council is reviewing its Air Quality Action plan as part of its commitment to improve air quality, identify problem areas and work with communities to reduce pollution.

The revised plan will include measures on how to reduce pollutions such as nitrogen dioxides and particulates from vehicles, boilers and construction sites. It contains 14 measures and 39 separate actions.

A consultation is being held to get local people's views before the final plan is published. Read the draft at www.wandsworth.gov.uk/airquality. On that page you can also follow the links to an online consultation. If you prefer a paper form, call (020) 8871 6251 or email Elteam@wandsworth.gov.uk.

This is the next in our regular advice column from the Wandsworth Citizens Advice Bureaux.

Settled and safe: a renter's right

Your local CAB is seeing more and more local people who are suffering problems with privately rented homes. Around one third of the borough's housing is privately rented so it's vital that local renters know what to do if there's a problem and landlords know about their obligations.

What can I do about disrepair?

Landlords must keep in good repair the structure and exterior of the home and installations for the supply of water, gas, electric, sanitation, space heating and heating water. If you have a problem tell your landlord as soon as possible and keep a record. If the landlord will not do the repair, you could consider:

Contacting the council's private housing team. It will investigate concerns about the condition and standards of private rented homes (call 020 8871 6171)

Taking court action – but this can be costly and time-consuming
Using the rent to pay for repairs - but you must follow the correct procedure – be sure to seek advice first

What if my landlord tries to evict me when I complain?

Some landlords have been known to attempt to evict the tenant if they do not want to do the repair, or can't afford it. From 1st October 2015 the law will change to protect tenants against retaliatory eviction. Until then, if you are an Assured Shorthold tenant, you may have little protection. If you are an Assured Tenant or a Protected Tenant, then you will have good protection from eviction.

Your landlord must follow the rules on eviction, whatever your tenancy status. Harassment and illegal eviction are criminal offences. If you are served with an eviction notice or asked or pressurised to leave, seek advice.

How do I ensure I get my deposit back?

Deposits taken by landlords for tenancies which commenced after April 2007 have to be protected in a government-backed tenancy deposit scheme. If this has not been done, a tenant can apply for a court order for return of the deposit or to protect it in a scheme. A landlord may be fined up to three times the amount of the deposit for failure to comply.

A landlord who has not protected your deposit may also be prevented from evicting a tenant until:

- They have returned the full deposit
- They have returned a lesser amount of the deposit to your, with the tenant's agreement
- A compensation claim brought by the tenant for non-compliance has been awarded or dismissed by the court, or withdrawn by the tenant, or settled between the parties.

Let's RECYCLE RIGHT

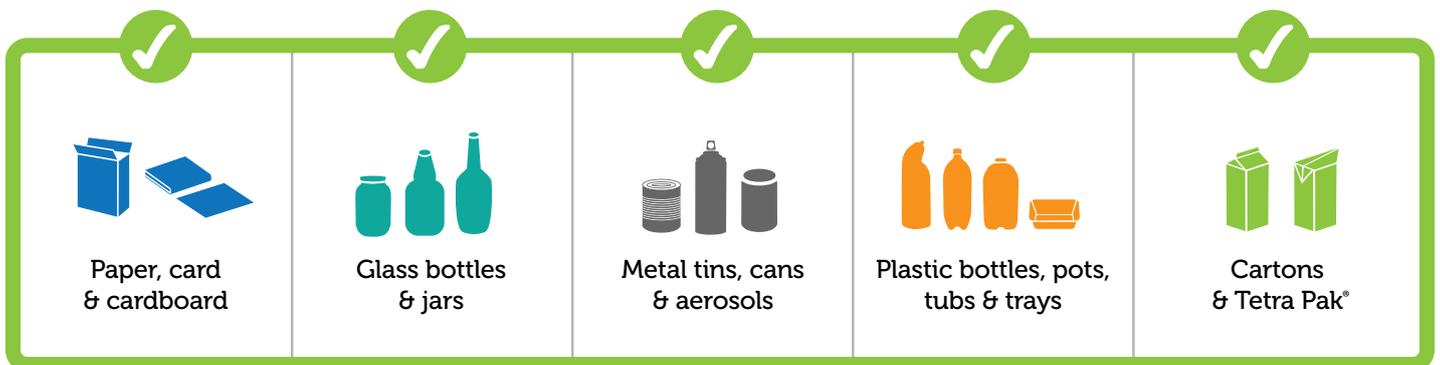

Why recycle?

Recycling is an easy way for us all to make a real difference to the environment. By choosing to recycle you are giving many items the chance to be remade into something new, instead of being wasted.

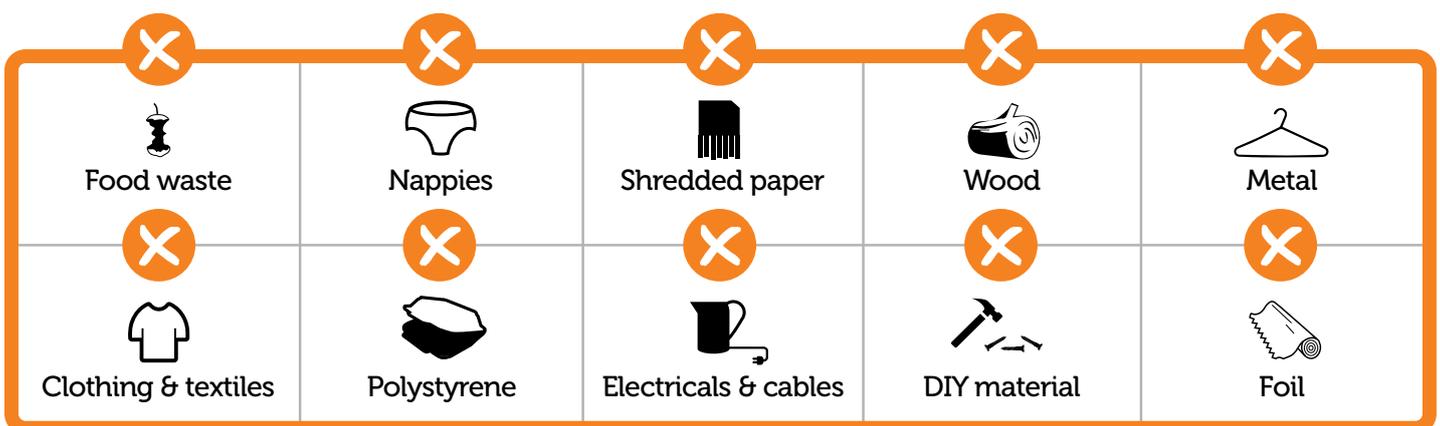

When you recycle you save the council money which can be better spent on other council services.

How do I recycle?

It couldn't be easier. Instead of throwing the items listed below in the bin, just throw them in your clear recycling sack or orange-lidded bank. The items just need to be clean and dry, and if you're putting in bottles or jars please remove the lids first.

Remember to Recycle Right by looking out for the materials below. Do not put them into your recycling sack or bank.

If you need help to Recycle Right please contact us and we will be happy to advise.
